URGENT:
MEDICAL DEVICE VOLUNTARY Recall
Recall Number: RA2023-XXXXXX

Product description The Boston Scientific Guider Softip™ XF Guide Catheter is a neurovascular access catheter that creates a stable conduit through which interventional devices can pass. It is constructed with a polymer liner on the inside diameter for lubricity, stainless steel wire reinforcement within the wall for torque transmission and strength, and polymer materials along the length of the catheter for support and flexibility. The catheter has an atraumatic tip and a hub/strain relief combination for kink resistance (at the hub), device connectivity, and device handling.

Product issue Stryker Neurovascular has observed that certain lots of Guider Softip™ XF Guide Catheters appear to have the incorrect tip curve shape. The impacted products were distributed with a tip curve shape which differs from the labeled tip curve shape. See example images below.

Potential hazard As our customer, you may have received a device with an incorrect labeled tip curve shape. However, the non-conforming tip curve shape is easily identifiable upon product inspection/preparation. There have been no reported patient harms.

Potential risks Potential Risk: Patients previously treated with the impacted devices: None.

For potential patients: If the incorrect tip curve shape is used, the most serious anticipated outcome would be that the guide catheter may not navigate to the desired anatomy location and would be exchanged for another device. However, the tip curve shape is easily identifiable upon product inspection/preparation; therefore, the most serious and most common anticipated health consequence that could occur is procedural delay while the device is swapped for another with the correct tip curve shape prior to use on the patient. Device exchange can be performed with no significant delay, and within the expected duration of the procedure.
